THE WEATHER

The immediate occasion of the unusually cool weather and northerly winds which have prevailed over northeastern districts during the last 24 hours was a fall in the barometer over New England to a low level, which has been accompanied by a marked increase of an anti-cyclone, created a steep gradient for northerly winds over the territory immediately to the westward of New England. The extent and sweep of the winds was further augmented by the prevalence of low barometric pressure for the season over the Gulf of Mexico and the entire Caribbean region.

Rising pressure on the northward facing coasts Sunday morning, if continued, may be taken to indicate an early return to more reasonable temperature over the northeastern portion of the United States.

The New England depression continues to advance slowly eastward and is diminishing in intensity. There has been no precipitation of consequence in the last 24 hours except in New England and the Great Lakes and the Duluth-Minneapolis region. Rain weather is indicated for all parts of the Washington forecast district during the next 48 hours except in Michigan and the lower lake region where showers are probable Tuesday.

The wind along the northern Atlantic will, at first, moderate northward to north rain.

Forecast.

GREENEVILLE

Storm Damage Trees Around the Village—Personal Notes.

Friday night storm did considerable damage about the village, mostly in the form of broken or branches on trees. A large tree near the Greenville school was blown down and fell on the roof. Other trees were blown down and in many cases shingles were blown from houses. No one was injured, although several parties who were late received thorough soakings.

Girls' Friendly Society Observes Anniversary.

St. Andrew's branch of the Girls' Friendly society observed the anniversary of the society on Sunday morning by a corporal service in the church instead of the usual picnic, which was set apart by the central council for intercession throughout the world for the Girls' Friendly society.

At the evening service there was a special service of admission, when five new members were admitted: Misses Annie Kendall, Cogle Stevens, Ruthwood McKinley, Edna Prochnik were received as members and Mrs. Helen A. Smith as a working associate.

In honor of the occasion the chancel and sanctuary were tastefully decorated with ferns and flowers.

rated with ferns and the altar with roses. The draperies of the altar were white instead of green to symbolize purity, innocence and joy. Selected hymns were sung by the vestry choir.

The Vespers Creator Spiritus was sung as a choral offering by Miss Hazel L. Banfield, accompanied by Miss Griffiths' piano. At the time appointed those to be admitted were presented by the church secretary, Miss Dorothy A. Smith, Rev. William H. Smith, rector of the parish, and Rev. Mr. John H. South, rector of the Girls' Friendly Society. The cardinal point was the protection of purity and the conservation of womanhood. Every candidate pledged Likes the Navy Service.

Raymond A. Hawkes of Hampton, Conn., who enlisted in the navy one year ago to do his bit, is serving in southern waters at present commanding "Babson" Young. Hawkes encourages all young men to enlist in the navy at once, as he says this branch of service can't be beat.

Remark as in need of electric power to be transmitted from "Norway," it is estimated that 200,000 horse power could be used.

FLAG RAISING AT DR. MANWARRING'S

With Mayor Desmond and Rev. A. J. Ayers as Speakers

Large Audience Assembles at East Great Plain—Mayor Desmond Leads Cheers For the Flag and For Patriotic Doctor.

Despite the threatening weather a large and patriotic company from all parts of the city gathered to witness flag raising on the beautiful grounds of Dr. Jer. Manwaring, at East Great Plain, at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

From the sun parlor of the old Conjonian inn the birthplace of Doctor Manwaring Tubbs' band opened the impressive exercises with the patriotic melody, "Song of the French," the national anthem of France.

It was a short speech, the Rev. A. J. Ayers, opened his eloquent and stirring address by prayers for our boys and for the nation.

In his address he called to mind four hundred years of progress—not only intellectual, educational, social and financial, but spiritual progress.

Patriotism in the midst of this progress with everything flowing smoothly, the lighting of a clear sky above Germany's destruction of England, France and Belgium.

Were they prepared? They were not. Is our country prepared for war? An example cited our Civil War—all cried peace, but had we been prepared, until misery might have been avoided.

Mr. Ayers spoke eloquently of his belief in the ruling power of Divine Providence, working now for the permanence of our freedom, the Stars and Stripes, after which Mayor Desmond would thank God for the victory which will prove that right prevails.

In his closing words he did not forget to pay high tribute to the American women, who stand shoulder to shoulder with the sons of America, France and England, who are fighting for the freedom of democracy.

After the close of the exercises the band played several patriotic airs while some of the guests went over the doctor's beautiful home, admiring its unique furnishings.

PRINCIPAL TIRRELL WAS GET-TOGETHER SPEAKER.

Many Men in Uniform Attend Sunday Afternoon Service at Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. lobby was the scene of much pleasure and profit Sunday afternoon from 3:30 to 7:30, when a number of men in uniform and several civilians enjoyed the third "Get-together." The program opened with several selections by Svalin's orchestra, after which a number of the popular war and patriotic songs were heartily sung by civilians and enlisted men alike.

After the singing of two verses of "Jesus, My God, to Thee I Turn," the Rev. J. W. Ayers, pastor of Grace Episcopal Church, offered a prayer. He was followed by Principal Henry A. Tirrell of the New Norwich Free Academy, and in the few minutes which he spoke he certainly interested every one present.

I have been wondering what to speak about this afternoon. I know very little about Germany, and we have not even a flag. I have trees in my office, and they came near enough, I might bring them down. My many experiences have been limited to a sailor, and that far, and never have been able to get back home without swimming.

What are we in this war for? Why do we enter it? We took one from Germany, and we were beaten. Then another insult, and yet others were given, until the decree came from Germany that we could send across no ships a week a week. They said: Thus far, and no farther, and we entered the war.

We look back at yesterday, when poetry politics and differences tended toward a separation of our nation, we can see that this struggle will well out a great nation to no detriment, and that the world or crew will bring us to victory.

In ending his remarks, he said, "We are fighting for right, and that right is democracy. We are fighting for brotherhood.

We also have another fight on our hands, and that fight is for character and it is an individual fight. It will take just as much courage and stamina to fight this battle as it will to fight the battle over there.

After the address the ladies of Park Congregational church served a tea party for the sailors and soldiers.

The number is still increasing at the Sunday breakfast at the Y. M. C. A. sailors and soldiers, and this far outnumbers the former. Edith Wilson, the chairman of the committee to turn out for the big parade that day, It was a unanimous vote to accept and the following committee was appointed with full power to attend to the Moose's part: Joseph Curran, Chas. Caufield, Joe Tibbeaut, C. O. Wright and George Goss.

Immediately after the special meeting the committee met and decided to invite the Westerly and Willimantic lodges and also to adopt the following uniform: white felt hat, black four-in-hand tie, white shirt with stiff collar and dark pants. Should the committee not be able to secure the proper quantity of these articles, they will arrange to have something else made to fit.

The brief address was made by Secretary Edward Jackson.

I bring you today a message from Italy. We have read of the recent successes of the Italian army; that the Austrians have lost about 120,000, and the sons of Italy have maintained a splendid defense. You recall that on one occasion when Napoleon gave orders to his troops to charge the British, he replied, "They shall be my Alp!" thus showing his indomitable spirit. The grim battle cry of the Italian army to day is "Non Passeranno," which means "They shall not pass."

This is a great battle cry, whether we are fighting with submarines, airplanes, battleships, infantry or artillery. It is also a great battle cry in the moral battle. We need to be aware of the enemy's ability to ruin us by the demoralization of our men in the service and out of it, so the casualty list of this enemy which destroys his efficiency and manhood and his very soul, I am glad that so many of the men who wear the uniform have for their battle cry against this enemy "Non Passeranno," and they are determined that he shall not pass to the vital of his life.

Then there is the devotion of the women, willing to ruin the enemy's victim. The woman's companionship comparable to the companionship of a pure woman, and on the other hand there is no companionship so dangerous to a young man as is the companionship of an impure woman, and we all need to have for our bath against this awful temptation "non passare."

To the pastor, to the German military, to the German in America and to the traitor and spy, we say emphatically "they shall not pass."

BELLOWS—In New London June 20, 1918, by Rev. J. Romeo Berg, pastor of the First Congregational Church. Berg was a great blessing to the people of New London.
